CUSHION/PRESS-ON TIRES

Cushion tires (also known as press-on tires) are made of solid rubber molded to a steel band. The rubber can either be traction or smooth. These tires are very durable and are best suited for indoor or light outdoor use on smooth surfaces.

PNEUMATIC TIRES

Pneumatic tires are similar to a car tire. They are made of traction rubber and filled with compressed air. Some companies fill their pneumatic tires with foam to avoid the upfront cost of solid pneumatic tires. Although less costly, we don't recommend filling pneumatic tires with foam because it increases pressure on the casing, making it less sustainable long term. Pneumatic tires are used indoors and outdoors when the work area is free of sharp objects.

SOLID PNEUMATIC FORKLIFT TIRES

Solid pneumatic forklift tires are made out of solid rubber. These tires are very durable and can't be punctured or deflated, which makes them ideal for industries with sharp debris like recycling centers or lumberyards.

NON-MARKING FORKLIFT TIRES

Non-marking tires are made with hydrated silicas and special additives for eliminating black marks on floors. They are available for pneumatic, solid pneumatic and cushion tires. These tires have a short life span and are prone to cause static electricity, which means they require an anti-static strip on the forklift.
